Strength in Diversity: Our Economic Power

This year, MedaWeek Barcelona offers a renewed image, full of symbolism. This edition's image conveys the Strength of the Mediterranean as seen through the momentum of the wave, which underlines the leading role of Mediterranean countries. Diversity – this year's theme – is shown by the combination of many different colors that, together, creates a strong and consolidated region. Lastly, the power of the Mediterranean is manifested through the majesty of the graphic composition, which serves as a reflection and reference for the rest of the world.

Venue	Casa Llotja de Mar, Barcelona, Spain
Date	22 nd -24 th November 2017

Despite its interconnected and dynamic history, the Mediterranean is today a highly fragmented region. It suffers from one of the sharpest GDP divides per capita in the world, as well as uneven trade models. In order to tap into the Mediterranean's socio-economic potential, the business community should look towards furthering competitiveness through greater economic sustainability, improved resource management in agricultural and environmental sectors, and improved infrastructure.

With over a decade of solid experience and successful outcomes, MedaWeek offers new and timely topics, ample networking opportunities, and serves as a central hub for representatives of the private sector – in the Mediterranean and beyond

The Mediterranean can also benefit from its current regional riches, in a way to strategize towards a progressive future. It should maximize its social resources – such as its vast human capital and young talent – and translate them into dynamic entrepreneurship and digital innovation, particularly in services. The region’s diversity should not result in fragmentation, but as a quality and advantage to: amplify and diversify economic trends, attract investment, and strengthen international cooperation between northern and southern Mediterranean countries.

Against this backdrop – and in line with this year’s claim “Strength in Diversity: Our Economic Power” – MedaWeek17 will address current challenges, while exploring new economic trends and solutions related to these regional shifts.

“ MedaWeek has become an innovative framework for cooperation, aimed at achieving a more prosperous, competitive and peaceful region ”

Miquel Valls

President of the Barcelona Chamber of Commerce

Forums

North Africa Business Development Forum ^{M14} W

Maghreb: Bridging the Gap between Europe and Africa

Co-organized with:
IEMed.
European Institute of the Mediterranean

This year, the NABDF celebrates 14 years since its debut, and will cover a number of new and innovative themes currently surrounding the North African market. Following a half-day format, the conference will unravel to explore:

- Europe-Maghreb-Sub-Saharan Africa: trilateral economic development cooperation
- Real Estate Investment Climate in North Africa
- Agri-business: Engine for growth, business and economic development

The forum will feature speakers from different backgrounds, skills and expertise from across the region. Given the dynamic format of the conference, participants and panelists alike are welcome to share their experiences, including business opportunities and most pressing challenges in the Mediterranean. Finally, the Forum will conclude with an ample networking session, offering plenty of business connections and opportunities within the framework of MedaWeek17.

Represented by the business community of both North Africa and the Mediterranean, #NABDF17 plans to bring to the surface key economic trends across the entire region

Mediterranean Islamic Finance Forum ⁴

Co-organized with:

Islamic finance is quickly growing. According to the World Bank, in the last decade alone, the industry enjoyed a 10-12% annual growth rate and accounts for about US $2 trillion. Even more revealing, is that the industry is not uniquely based in Islamic countries, and is gradually picking-up in a number of non-Muslim countries around the world. In particular, it is becoming increasingly common in financial (non-Muslim) hubs across Europe, Africa, and Asia. In other words, Islamic Financing is being adopted treated as a universal model of financing around the world.

For the Mediterranean, this presents a valuable economic and commercial opportunity. The region enjoys potential clients and users of Islamic Financing, both in Muslim countries and non. The Maghreb, Middle East and Europe enjoy a combined population of 250 million people.

Furthermore, Islamic Financing has also been recognized as a model for sustainable development and financial inclusion. This is especially true for small and poor businesses, with little to no access to finance. A sort of democratization of access to finances, which thrives on partner-style financing, Islamic Financing is a tool for fostering shared prosperity.

#MedalIslamicFinance17 will offer a unique networking opportunity for regulators, industry practitioners, business leaders and Shariah scholars to share their views and experience

Mediterranean Women Entrepreneurs Forum M⁹W

Changing the game in the workplace: Gender, power and politics

Women all across the world are increasingly faced with the challenge of juggling their professional careers with their personal ones. Particularly in the business community, women's roles are changing dramatically, both at work and at home. While it may appear as though women's role in the workplace is a recurring theme, the rapidly changing dynamics in the social and economic realms surrounding businesswomen in the Mediterranean calls for new, tailor-made solutions.

Businesswomen, policy-makers, entrepreneurs and spokeswomen from across a variety of domains will be featured throughout the event in order to share experience and encourage discussion with the audience.

Co-organized with:

#MedaWomen17 will explore themes relevant to an evolving society, using innovative tools and unconventional approaches

The textile industry is one of the most strategic sectors, both at regional and international level. In particular, the Mediterranean enjoys among 300 of the largest global textile companies, as well as an ample design and clothing presence.

For instance, Turkey's textile industry represents 40% of national exports, and an employment base of two million people. Tunisia remains the EU's second supplier in this market which represents the most important sector of the economy. Similarly, in Morocco, the textile industry remains the country's main economic activity.

Given the importance of this sector in the region, the MediTex Summit will feature the most important aspects surrounding the industry:

- Economic trends in the industry: changes in the production process
- Sourcing: Digital & innovative marketing beyond physical space
- Designers and emerging trends: in key Mediterranean markets

This #MediTex17 forum will encourage discussion, reflection and exchange of ideas on these very concepts, with the aim of tackling key challenges and seizing the region's business opportunities

EcoMeda Green Summit ⁷

The EcoMeda Green Summit aims to merge the interests of the Mediterranean private sector with environmental values, by creating greater awareness and finding synergies between the two.

The summit explores the region's most profitable and pronounced environmental sectors, including Solar and Water energy, Circular Economy, and Smart Cities. Key experts and prime regional players will convene to exchange knowledge and best-practices surrounding environment priorities and challenges, promote green economy on a regional and global scale, and support companies with implementing sustainable programs through resource efficiency and cleaner production.

At #MedaGreen17 key international speakers will take part in lively debates, conferences and exchanges of experiences
